Sanibel ranks among Travel + Leisure's Top Shelling Beaches'

Travel + Leisure magazine has named Sanibel Island one of the "Top Shelling Beaches" in its July 2008 issue.

The highly regarded travel magazine, with a circulation of 950,000, praises Sanibel as being the "shellers' Mecca" and acknowledges it as among the top beaches to "find the best unburied treasures in the U.S."

According to Travel + Leisure editor Nancy Novogrod, traveling to new destinations in the U.S. is the popular trend for the summer. "Staying closer to home is no fallback plan," Novogrod says, "especially when you consider how many entertaining new experiences there are to be had."

The Beaches of Fort Myers & Sanibel yield some 400 species of multi-colored seashells, from the commonplace scallop and clam to the exotic tulips, olives, fragile paper fig shells and the rarest of them all, the brown speckled junonia.
